Scared Out of Her Wits.

Mamie Lynch, a young woman employed at the cartridge factory in Bridgeport, Conn., was made the victim BALM of a practical joke a few days ago, and OF a practical joke a few days ago, and as a result she is now confined to her local Passages.

Allays Pain and Indammation.

Of a practical joke a few days ago, and as a result she is now confined to her local feet bed, her reason shattered, and the chances for her recovery doubtful. bed, her reason shattered, and the 1000 large

It was only a short time ago that, at the same factory, Mamie Luther was taken in hand by a number of shop-mates and rolled in a barrel, and was so frightened that for days she hovered between life and death.

The recent incident has been kept quiet as possible, but details are even more startling than the barrel-rolling incident. The first of the week, Etha Jameson, who is employed in the same room with the Lynch girl, purchased a toy snake made of paper. It was three feet long, and greatly resembled a live She took it to the factory, determined to have some fun.

The Lynch girl was selected as the one upon whom the joke should be played. By the most ingenious contrivance the snake was arranged so that it would appear to the victim more realis tic. A long piece of thread was attached to the snake. It was then piaced on the back of the machine at which the girl was working, and the tread brought over it and attached to the shafting of another machine.

All this was arranged at noon-time when the machinery was at a standtill. When the wheels were again in motion the girls who were let into the secret gathered about to witness the re sult of their work. The thread on the machine wound round and round and soon up through the machinery of the press which Mattie Lynch was working came a long green snake, its mouth open. The girl did not see it until the head of the serpent appeared in full view, and with a cry she jumped from the seat.

The Jamieson girl, not content with this, snatched the snake from the thread, and with it in her hands started after the girl. From room to room the chase was carried on until the Lynch girl dropped from exhaustion and fright.

The joke was more than the perpe-trators had bargained for. The gir was crazed with fright, and is confined to her bed. Physicians are endeavor ing to bring her back to reason. It is not certain as yet that the affliction will prove permanent, but it will be a very narrow escape.

A WOMAN OF PLUCK .- In a murder trial in Chicago, a Mrs. B. routed the lawyers completely. We learn from the Inter Ocean that when the lawyers began interrupting her, she said:

"I am brought here to tell what I know, and I am going to tell it." And, despite all the efforts of the lawyers, he did tell her story in her own way FOR SALE BY E. S. LEADBEATER & SONS | To one of the lawyers who interrupted her, she said, "You just keep still, son ner, she said. Tou just keep still, some ny, and don't interrupt. I shall tell the whole truth." And another, after trying to stop her in her flow of talk, threw up his hands despairingly, and cried, "It's no use. I give it up." In fact, the lady bulldozed the court and utterly cowed the lawyers. Her conduct must have delighted the witnesses who had for days been bully-ragged by the lawyers. If there were more Mrs. Bs. on the witness stand there would be less impertinence and downright insolence shown by lawyers in examining witnesses.

> A FOLDING BED'S DEATH CLUTCH .- Mrs J. E. Clough, wife of the prominent Baptist nissionary, died at Evansville, Ill., Monday from injuries received in a folding bed, which losed up on her and crushed her body into an insensible clod, while her daughter stood by powerless to prevent. That she too, was not crushed to death was due to an accident. The two retired about 11 o'clock Saturday evening. The mother was first in bed and 'he daughter, Gratia, finishing her toilet, sat on the foot of the bed, which was supported by two fragile legs. Suddenly there was a creaking sound and then a crush. The leg had given way and fallen to the floor. With a shrick Gratia leaped to her feet just in time to escape the heavy board as it fell upon her helpless mother. Vainly she tried to lift it and release her. Dr. William Bradley, with whom they lived, and young Mr. Clough rushed in and extricated the poor woman from the broken bed. The neck was found twisted, part of the brain was seriously injured, and the spinal chord itself had been strained and all but broken. Mrs. Clough soon revived but was totally paralyzed, and died a lingering death. an insensible clod, while her daughter stood
